Introduction

Throughout my Warden Hill years, the British values have made me who I am today. They have helped me to learn; make the right choices and to be myself. The British values (Democracy, Rule of Law, Mutual Respect and Tolerance and Individual Liberty) are used in our everyday lives without us even knowing- this is because we live in a democratic society. But how are they shown in Warden Hill?

Democracy

At Warden Hill Primary School, Democracy is a key thing to make everything fair- we use it to determine who will be the Eco and School Council members. We also use it to do many other things such as: House Captain Elections and what our class read should be. I have been an Eco warrior and have had a chance to save the environment.

When we vote we consider all characteristics/content of what we are voting on. Eco and School Council are tasked with different challenges each term depending what role they play.

Without Democracy it would be the same people, making the same decisions that suit them... but we're lucky, we're not like that, at Warden Hill, everyone's voice is heard. Democracy can also decide the rules.

Rule of Law

Rule of Law.

Most people think of laws as something that is stopping them from things they want to do but are not allowed, but that is not the reason: rules are there to keep you safe. Without them our world will be a danger to everyone! In our school, rules are just as important as they are in the real world. We are not allowed to break school equipment; we have no bullying in our school; we treat everybody the same and many more. All of these rules are so that nobody get upset or injured.

Mutual Respect and Tolerance

In our RE lessons at Warden Hill we learn about all religions and cultures. They give us a deep-rooted understanding and therefore empowers us with tolerance of different religions. One quote that we looked at in our lessons was from Mahatma Gandhi.

‘Be the change you want to see in the world.’

Although Gandhi had very strong beliefs in Hinduism, he still respected all the other religions there are in the world. We also have assemblies that celebrate differences every Monday and Thursday which help us understand what they think about what they believe and do. We can choose what we believe.

Individual Liberty

Individual Liberty is to have a freedom to make you own choices.

Especially in Year six, there are many opportunities to take part in whatever we wish. We all have a voice which is just as important as anyone else’s. I made a personal choice to continue to wear the old school uniform. With our South American booklets, we got to decide everything that went into our booklets. Also, when we were preparing for our SATS Maths tests, we got to choose what we wanted to work on – from algebra to percentages. In the auditions for our play, we got to audition for whatever role we wanted. In Warden Hill, we have a lot of chances to participate in any events we want.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the British Values that have been incorporated into my life have helped me Belong, Explore and Succeed. The British Values: the rules we all live by.
