

BRITISH VALUES

How do British values shape us? British values make up how we choose to live. They also give us the freedom to make our own choices and regularly keep us safe.

DEMOCRACY

Democracy is a key part of our lives; it makes sure everyone in the country has a voice. At Warden Hill we also work under a democracy as we all have a say on who does what. Like our House, Vice and Sports Captains and the Eco and School Council elections. We all have a say in assemblies and classrooms, no idea is ever left out. This prepares us for when we must make big decisions when we are older.

RULE OF LAW

The Rule of Law is often something that keeps us safe and stops us from doing dangerous things. At our school, we have something called the Golden Rules cover all areas of school life, which help us to know if we are behaving correctly.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY

Individual Liberty is a key part of Britain. It gives us the freedom to make our own individual choices. We have individual liberty at Warden Hill, a great example is when we have the freedom of choice to pick what clubs we do. We also have the freedom of choice when we pick which role we do in an assembly.

MUTUAL RESPECT AND TOLERANCE

Mutual respect and tolerance are essential in our British values, it helps us treat everyone how they would like to be treated. In our RE lessons we talk about other beliefs and religions to help us understand different beliefs. We have an owl in each class which helps us respect each other. The owl is used to show whose turn it is to talk and have their opinions heard respectfully.

CONCLUSION

Most people choose to continue to live in line with their British values, but after all you can choose how to live your life. Your values are yours to choose, and you have the choice of what you do, but always try to do the right thing.
